

BOLSHEVIKI GOVERNMENT OVERTHROWN?

LAST CALL ISSUED FOR ALL LAGGARDS

Success of W. S. S. Drive In Township Depends On Last Efforts.

OFFICE OPEN THIS EVE

With Patriotic Response By Citizens Township Will Go Over the Top.

BULLETIN. Fred N. Vaughan, chairman of the township of Amboy, reported this afternoon that that township had gone over the top.

"It's up to those who have failed to do as their consciences have dictated." Such was the reply The Telegraph received this morning in answer to an inquiry as to whether Dixon township would succeed in pledging its $140,000 quota of War Savings Stamps, the drive for which closes today. This morning the total was close enough to the minimum figure to warrant the committee in hoping for the best; and with that hope in mind the various shock squads were put to work today. They may not reach all the laggards before night, and therefore headquarters at the Dixon Realty office will be kept open until 9 o'clock tonight. Have YOU pledged ALL you CAN?

PLAN FOR UNIVERSAL TRAINING IS COMING

PRESIDENT WON FOR WAR TRAINING FOR YOUTHS AND WIDER DRAFT LIMITS

Washington, D. C., June 27.—President Wilson, it was learned today from an authoritative source, is preparing to advocate universal military training as a war measure. The tentative plan of the administration is to submit to congress at an early date a bill extending the draft age and also establishing universal military training for American youths below the draft age. The question of providing military training for all young men as a peace policy is to be determined after the war. The theory is that if the president's ideal of universal peace seems to be attained in this war it would be unnecessary to maintain a large military establishment and the training of youths would be abandoned. If, however, the recurrence of war should appear possible the nation would have in operation a system of universal military training which could be continued. Explains Baker's Action It transpired today that the prospective embodiment of this plan in an administration measure accounted for Secretary of War Baker's urgent recommendation that the senate postpone action on the proposed extension of the draft age until the war department completes a survey of national man power and brings a comprehensive scheme for the expansion of the army. The general staff of the army is now formulating the entire plan for the development of the armies which must be relied upon to defeat Germany. The staff will submit to Secretary Baker and President Wilson a detailed report showing the forces that can be raised by extending the draft age to various limits.

CIGAR STORE IS NOW IMPROVED

Painters and decorators are transforming Stratton & Covert's store into one of the most tastefully attired establishments in the city. New fixtures, including a soda fountain, have been installed and the alterations made in the interior arrangements have done much to improve the appearance of the store.

TALKED SELF OUT OF A JOB

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Paris, June 26.—Dr. von Kuehlmann has tendered his resignation of German Foreign Secretary, says a dispatch, which adds it is believed Emperor William will accept it.

AMBOY MAN MAY GO TO FREEPORT

James Legan, the Amboy merchant who has gotten into trouble with the federal authorities through his alleged remarks, is still being held in the Lee County Jail on order of States Attorney Harry Edwards and an investigation concerning his case is proceeding. If the investigation shows good reason, Logan will be taken soon to Freeport to face the United States Commissioner for a hearing.

OGLE COUNTY MEN HAVE COLLECTION OF MANY FIREARMS

Many Hundreds of Ancient and Modern Pistols, Rifles, Swords, Etc. HAVE MANY VISITORS

Henry C. Wamsley, who lives on the Lanark road, 3 miles northwest of Polo, was a recent Dixon visitor, and while here he allowed The Telegraph to interview him concerning his wonderful collection of small arms and other implements of warfare, ancient and modern, which he and his brother, Frank Wamsley, have at their home in Ogle county. The collection includes bayonets, swords, cannon balls and rifle bullets of a wide variety; 224 pistols and revolvers, 300 rifles, ranging from the most modern repeating, high velocity rifle to an antique Japanese rifle that is 200 years old, and a blunderbuss pistol 300 years old is contained by the modern automatic pistol of the present day. The Wamsley brothers have been making their collection since 1898.

Among the interesting features of this wonderfully interesting collection will be found: A single barreled shot gun, the longest in the United States; a ten gauge cylinder shot gun that is worth from $200 to $250. The collection takes rank among the best in the United States.

Henry Wamsley is 70 years old, and Frank is six years his junior. They live on their father's old homestead, which is now worked by tenants. At one time the land was employed as a very large nursery where Mr. Wamsley employed twelve men. In later years one of the finest dairies was maintained, and over a hundred pounds of butter was shipped to Chicago weekly. In 1893 Henry Wamsley received third prize for his butter exhibit at the World's Fair. The two brothers take much pleasure in entertaining their friends. They have a guest book which shows that 1050 guests registered as visitors at their farm during the past year.

Are Patriotic. Both of the men are very patriotic and have placed in their home a Red Cross box for the use of those who wish to donate to the great cause. This box was made for a similar patriotic purpose by the mother of the Wamsley brothers in civil war days. Mrs. Wamsley died in 1912, and was at that time over 80 years of age.

Visitors at the Wamsley farm are greatly interested in the unique and valuable collection of arms found there, and the brothers have also provided a graphophone, with 150 records, for the further entertainment of guests.

CO. F. DANCE THIS EVENING

Excellent weather for tonight and a reputation of having had at their first party one of the most enjoyable dances of the season, the members of Co. F anticipate a large attendance and a happy time at their second dance at the Armory this evening. Ladies will be extended free courtesies for this evening, the hall will be cooled by a large number of electric fans and the Marquette orchestra will play.

ELEVEN DEAD IN PARIS RAID

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Paris, June 28.—Eleven persons were killed and 14 injured by explosions of bombs dropped by German air raiders over the Paris district last night. There were several groups of enemy machines, which took different routes to escape the barrier of defensive fire about the city, and during the commotion in the air some of the machines were evidently able to penetrate the wall of defense, for bombs began to drop almost immediately. HUNGRY HUNGARY GARRISONS ARE VERY REBELLIOUS

2,000 Soldiers At Peos and Gyor Are Sentenced to Death For Riot.

BIG DEMONSTRATIONS

Feeling of Revolt Spreading In the Army of the Dual Powers.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Paris, June 28.—There have been rebellious outbreaks among the garrisons of the cities of Gyor and Peos in Hungary, as a result of which 2,000 of the military involved in the mutinies have been condemned to death, says the Matni. Both Austria and Hungary are gripped by the revolution, which is progressing on a large scale, say the newspaper advices, which declare the spirit is strongly persuasive in the army. Violent demonstrations have occurred in other cities.

Peos is 105 miles southwest of Budapest and has a population of 45,000. Gyor is a city of some 28,000 and is 67 miles northwest of Budapest.

HEAVY RAIN CAUSED DAMAGE TO GRAIN

Small Grains Beaten Into Ground By Downpour Yesterday.

THREE HORSES DEAD

Nearly an inch and a quarter of rain fell during the storms which visited Dixon and vicinity yesterday afternoon and evening, but fortunately this immediate community escaped the severe wind which accompanied the downpour west and southwest of the city. At Sterling and south of that city trees were blown down and great damage was done the small grain.

The heavy rain beat the small grains down in Leg county also causing considerable loss. Stock Was Killed At the Michael O'Malley farm in Marion township, which is tenanted by Elmer Ringler, a cold bolt of lightning struck the barn killing three horses, and John Hewitt of Teals Corners reports the loss of a valuable cow by lightning.

A delightful afternoon was spent in playing various games, in the enjoyment of piano music, solos, etc. One pleasant feature was the showing of handkerchiefs upon Ruth and Fern as a token of remembrance from each of their friends. Helen Spratt, of Franklin Grove, was an out of town guest.

A most tempting luncheon was served at 5 o'clock by Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Gylleck, and Mrs. Bates.

PAULINE PLOTKA IS FREED OF GUILT IN DR. JINDRA MURDER

Chicago Jury Frees Girl Who Shot Hospital Interne.

JURY GREETED GIRL

Chicago, June 28.—Pauline Plotka goes free. She was acquitted last night of the murder of Dr. Anton J. Jindra, interne at the county hospital. The verdict was returned by a jury in Judge Sabath's court at 8 o'clock.

The jury was out three and a half hours. Five ballots were taken. The first three stood 10 to 2 for acquittal. The fourth was 11 to 1 for acquittal, and the fifth was unanimous in turning the defendant free.

"Now may we step over and shake hands with the little lady?" was the first question addressed to the court by Nicholas H. Stahl, foreman of the jury, as soon as Clerk Tom Lavin had read the verdict.

Miss Plotka heard the verdict with a moan, but she straightened in her chair. A few minutes later, after the jurors had congratulated her, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Mitchell, in whose business she was employed, took her arm and led her across the room, where she shook hands with Assistant States' Attorney Irwin Walker, who, with Attorney O'Brien, directed the prosecution.

The jury retired at 4:30 and at 6 Judge Sabath adjourned court. At 7 the crowd of women and men who have followed the trial were clamoring again for admittance. There was an abrupt hush in their chattering when a knocking at the door apprised of the fact that the jury had reached a verdict.

How She Met Verdict. Pauline Plotka, the "frail, shivering little shop girl," as her attorney, Patrick O'Donnell, had described her in his address to the jury a few hours before, threw up her arms as if to ward off a blow and then bent forward and hid her face as the knocking was heard. When Foreman Stahl announced that a verdict had been reached she slumped lower in her chair and appeared to be about to faint. A man was her only response to the verdict that she was a free woman.

Dr. Jindra was shot and killed at the county hospital on Feb. 15, 1918. Miss Plotka pleaded at the trial that he had betrayed her and beaten her and that at the time of the shooting she was in the act of taking her own life when he interfered. During the struggle the revolver was fired. The girl claimed that her memory was a blank as to what had occurred until the next morning.

Oak Forest Red Cross

The Oak Forest Red Cross unit, whose members reside on farms, which are not all so near together, met yesterday in all that pouring rain at the home of Mrs. Oscar Miller. Eleven members were present, certainly evincing their patriotism, and the ten hospital garments were well on their way to completion in spite of the fact that the members were handicapped because of no one sewing machine. The next meeting will be held in two weeks on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Brooks.

Visited in City.

Mrs. Camp and Miss Bess Camp have returned from a ten-day visit with relatives in Chicago.

DRAWING GIVES ORDER MEN WILL BE LISTED IN VARIOUS CLASSES

Questionnaires Will Be Examined Soon and Men Classified.

REVISED LIST IS HERE

Errors Made in Transmission of Numbers Corrected by Later Data

The order in which numbers of registrants of June 5, last, were drawn at Washington yesterday, did not necessarily determine the rotation in which the men will be called to service. It merely determines the order which they will be listed in the various classes to which they will be finally assigned by the local and district boards. In these various classes, to which they will be assigned after the questionnaires, which are now in their hands, are returned, they will follow the men left in those classes from the action of the board on men registered June 5, 1917.

In the rush of sending the numbers over the wires at the time of the drawing at the national capital yesterday several errors and omissions were made. A revised list, showing the correct order of drawing, sent out by the Associated Press last evening, shows Lee county names in the following order:

- | No. | Name and Address. |
|-----|-----------------------------------|
| 1— | Edward Behrends, Jr., Rochelle |
| 2— | Herbert J. Long, Harmon. |
| 3— | Jack Halvesta, Dixon. |
| 4— | Walter B. Hummell, Dixon. |
| 5— | Marvin J. N. Wedlock, Amboy. |
| 6— | William J. Gehant, West Brooklyn. |
| 7— | William O. Auchstetter, Sublette. |
| 8— | John B. Bell, Walnut. |
| 9— | William K. Miller, Dixon. |
| 10— | Franklin F. McCray, Amboy. |
| 11— | John C. Gardner, Amboy. |
| 12— | Frank W. Branigan, Amboy. |
| 13— | Albert L. Tarbell, Paw Paw. |
| 14— | Elmer L. Holcomb, Amboy. |
| 15— | Earl J. Drew, Dixon. |

TALKED DISLOYALTY NOW MINUS TEETH

PAUL ABBE IS SAID TO HAVE SPOUTED GERMAN SYMPATHIES BEFORE WRONG MAN

When Paul Abbe, a young German who is said to have taken out his first citizenship papers here—according to information given the Loyalty Committee, told fellow employees at the Reynolds wire factory this afternoon that he was going to get into Canada and join German sympathizers, if possible, some man with a lot of American blood in his veins gave him a lesson in citizenship. Abbe, if he doesn't land in Ft. Leavenworth, may have an opportunity to go to Canada—after the war—but he will go with a nose that was broken and minus several teeth which were knocked out by the aforesaid American. Abbe was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Schoenholz and is being given a hearing before the Loyalty committee this afternoon.

COPENHAGEN REPORTS GEN. KORNILOFF HAS CAPTURED MOSCOW

Former Grand Duke Nicholas Said To Have Been Proclaimed Emperor By Conquering Troops—Treachery of Members of Red Guard Who Murdered Officers and Then Surrendered Said To Have Made Overthrow Possible—Kerensky Is Again In Favor.

RUSSIAN MINISTER OF WAR CONFIRMS DEATH

By Associated Press Leased Wire. London, June 28.—Unconfirmed reports that the Bolshevik government in Russia has been overthrown were received here today in dispatches to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Copenhagen, which adds that former Grand Duke Nicholas has been proclaimed Emperor. The dispatches say Moscow was captured by Gen. Korniloff, supported by German troops.

Gen. Kalendines, hetman of the Don Cossacks, is said to have co-operated with Korniloff.

Nikolas Lenine, premier, and Leon Trotsky, minister of war under the Bolshevik government, are said to have fled to the Murman coast.

Theadvice received in Copenhagen say the supporters of Nicholas have also overthrown the Soviets through out Irkutsk and two other Siberian provinces.

The defeat of the Bolsheviks was made possible by victories of the Czecho-Slovak forces and the treachery of the Red Guard. Several detachments of the Red Guard are said to have murdered their officers and to have then surrendered.

THINK KERENSKY WILL BE THE MAN OF THE FUTURE IN RUSSIA

The Copenhagen News, says the dispatch, gives promise to a Berlin message stating that the Tages Zeitung had received a message from Petrograd sources telling of the overthrow of the Bolsheviks, and adds: "It is believed here (Copenhagen) that the Bolsheviks will soon be overthrown and that Kerensky is the man of the future in Russia.

LONDON AUTHORITIES ARE SKEPTICAL CONCERNING NEWS

The Exchange Telegraph published the telegram containing the report of the overthrow of the Bolsheviks and the accompanying details "with reserve" and points out that the information comes from German sources, and therefore should be accepted with caution.

Bible Class Supper
With tables spread on the large porches at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Vail, Chula Vista Park, the members of the Bible class of the Presbyterian Sunday School taught by Dr. S. W. Lehman, could watch the shining raindrops fall without a feeling that they were spoiling their picnic in the least, although the original intentions had been to serve the supper on the lawn. Forty members were present and spent a delightful evening, only regretting that the storm had prevented the teacher from getting in from a country call in time for the supper, which was a most enjoyable one. James Clemon sang several selections, Mrs. Tidball also sang, and class members all united in the singing of patriotic airs in the after-supper hour.

Practical Club
The members of the Practical club will meet on Tuesday afternoon at the Red Cross shop at the courthouse. Every member is urged to be present.

Meetings Abandoned.
Ever so many affairs whose reports would grace the Society column today—the meeting of the Baptist Industrial Department with Miss Pratt, the Dorcas society meeting at the church, the E. R. B. class meeting to have been held with Miss Alma Moeller, the B. N. A. social, etc., went by the board yesterday because of the heavy rains of the afternoon and evening.

U. C. T. Auxiliary.
A pleasant meeting of the United Commercial Travelers was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. E. Hill. Here, too, the attendance was decreased by the rain. During the afternoon the ladies affixed the stars—three in number—on the service flag which they plan to present to the U. C. T. Council and also busily knitted on Red Cross articles. Tempting light refreshments were served by the hostess who, however, kept them in accordance with Mr. Hoover's ideas. The Auxiliary will dispense with its meetings during the hot months of July and August.

With Relatives.
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster of Clayton, Ill., are guests of Dixon relatives, the Edward Shawger and George Carbaugh families.

Returned from Dayton
Mrs. Klopinger returned yesterday from Dayton, Ohio, for a visit with her son Harold, who is in the aviation signal corps and is engaged in making blue prints of aeroplanes at Washington, D. C., but was for a few weeks at Dayton. Miss Edith Klopinger, who was also at Dayton, is now visiting at Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Klopinger also visited his son at Dayton but returned some little time ago.

Growing Beets.
By experiment with sugar beets, it has been proved that plants growing close to the ground thrive better when planted in rows running from east to west, rather than from north to south.

Never Quit Studying.
One of the troubles with this world is that most of the people in it have the notion that they have to quit studying just as soon as they leave school.—Exchange.

Should Use Zinc Rivets.
It is not wise to fasten zinc-iron sheets together with iron or steel rivets. These soon rust if not painted, and the rust penetrates through the edges of the iron encircling the rivets, and thus proves disastrous. Only zinc or zinc-covered rivets should be so used.

Olden-Time Face Powder.
Prof. M. P. Philbrick of the University of Washington told the Washington State Philological society that women of the seventeenth century powdered their cheeks with corrosive sublimate—bichloride of mercury—and with white lead. And they perfumed their gloves with ambergris.

Silk Industry in France.
The culture of silkworms in France has been made such an exact science that the weight of cocoons harvested in proportion to eggs hatched has been doubled in a few years.

Ostriches Waltz in Desert.
One of the oddest sights on the sandy stretches of a plain in southern Africa is a party of waltzing ostriches. When there are a number of them they will start off, and after running a few hundred yards, will stop and, with raised wings, will whirl rapidly round until they are stupefied, or perhaps break a leg. The males pose also before fighting. They kneel on their ankles, opening their wings, and balancing themselves alternately forward and backward, or to one side or the other, while the neck is stretched out on a level with the back and the head strikes the sides, now on the right, now on the left, while the feathers are bristling. The bird appears at this time so absorbed in its occupation as to forget all that is going on around him, and can be approached and caught. The male alone utters a cry, which sounds much like an effort to speak with the mouth shut tight.

Wrong Valuations.
After all, most of us place a wrong valuation on the things of life, ob serves an investigator. Many of us are made miserable by the fear of ridicule, others by fear of censure, fear of public opinion, fear of failure—these are stumbling blocks in the way of many who long for success. Faith can remove mountains. Difficulties that have seemed altogether insurmountable give way before courage. The person who has high faith, deep and abiding courage, faith in oneself and in human nature, courage as a shield against misfortune, will never lose the fight, permanently, whatever it may be. For what one loses in material things one will gain in character, and character is all that is needed in this world for any real and lasting success.

Company Did Not Count.
Elizabeth was accustomed to having her papa put her to bed. One evening when her father returned from the office he found several women with his wife who were busy in some committee work. Elizabeth was sleepy and at once asked papa to put her to bed. He in whispered conference told her it would not be nice to leave their company and go to bed, and then proceeded to relate some pretty stories fitting to the pictures of a magazine which he had brought with him. After a time the stories became dull to Elizabeth, and, the committee being still engaged in work, she pulled her papa's head down and said, "Papa, please let's go up to bed; these folks are no company of ours."

Finger-Print Identification Not New

According to a scientist of the Field museum, Chicago, the taking of finger prints as a means of identification was used by the Chinese and Japanese at least a thousand years ago. Writing in Science to controvert Sir William J. Herchel's claim to the credit for the invention, he quotes Rashid-eddin, the famous Persian historian, who described in 1303 the then ancient Chinese custom; Soleiman, an Arabian merchant, who wrote in A. D. 851 that in China creditors' bills were marked by the debtor with his fingers, and three centuries later A. D. 782 and 786, both finger marked and bearing a note to the effect that the parties thereto had affixed the impressions of their fingers.

It Paid to Wait.

A new version of "safety first" was illustrated on Commercial street, says the Portland Press. A long train of freight cars was being shifted over the street and a boy started to make a dash around the end in order to avoid the wait that would be necessary to let the train go by. A man standing near sized up the space and decided that there was not room for the young man to work his way through, grabbed him by the arm and said "Hold on, kid! You better wait here ten minutes than wait in your grave a million years." And the kid thought that was good advice. At any rate he stopped and let the train go by.

Canes of Early Days.

The cane of early American history, like that of biblical times, was part of the repertoire of the leaders of the church. It was the principal badge of the deacon. The cane was about five feet long. One end was embellished with a big knob, the other with feathers. When the small boy rebelled against the straight-back pew, he got a rap on the head with the uncharitable end of the cane. If the head of the family got to dreaming about his old English home and the cozy little nest in one of the shires, the turkey's plumage on the deacon's cane feathered the sleeper into life again.

Pie Looked Good.

While visitors were having dinner at a friend's home a neighbor's little boy came along. Seeing that the guests were at the table, he seated himself on a couch on the side of the dining room. He remained quite until the hostess passed him with a tray on which she had the dessert. Then he smiled brightly and said, "My, but that pie looks good going by."

Semitic Languages.
Hebrew and Chaldean are sister dialects of a great family of languages to which the name of Semitic has usually been given from the real or supposed descent of the people speaking them from the patriarch Shem. Shem was the eldest son of Noah, born (Genesis 5:32) when his father had attained the age of 500 years. He was ninety-eight years old, married and childless at the time of the deluge. He died at the age of six hundred years.

Transplanting Plants.
When transplanting plants, shrubs, trees, flowers and so on, dig a hole much deeper than needed; fill this hole with water, allowing it to sink away three times, refilling it each time. The fourth time it sinks away you will have enough moisture at the root of your plant to last many days. It does for it what no amount of surface wettings could ever do. So fill the hole up to the proper depth with dry earth, set your plant in and draw the dry dirt around it nicely.

ALL ABOUT ALL SERVICES.Is there anything that you would like to know about any of the organizations, or branches of organizations or twigs of organizations that have linked themselves together in the United States to win the war.If you want to know how many stamps to put on a soldier's letter, or who runs the Red Cross, or how to tell the rank of a naval officer, or any of those baffling things that the war has made it advisable for you to know, you will find them plainly and neatly told in the National Hand Book, issued by the Committee on Public Information.If there is any information concerning war service that is not contained in this red, white and blue banded book, it is because no curious person has been found to ask it, for it is to meet the overwhelming inquiries that have come to the committee that the book has been published."It is to point out the most useful avenues of service and at the same time inform each member of the community of the varied tasks undertaken by the army and navy, and in the air, behind the plow and at the machine, by banks and railroads, by doctors, nurses and workers, by social workers everywhere, that this Hand Book is sent throughout the nation." Is the statement of its purpose, made in the introduction by George Creel, chairman of the committee.It is a book which every person doing war work, and every person who ought to be doing war work, should read. The State Council of Defense has received 1,000 copies for distribution, and as long as they last, anyone who sends in fifteen cents, which is the price, may have one. Address, Neighborhood Committee, State Council of Defense, 120 West Adams Street, Chicago.A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.Every community in Illinois will be able to get a message from President Wilson on July Fourth. Wherever there is a meeting in celebration of the nation's birthday it should be read. The message is to be given out through the Four Minute men. They will read it at all meetings they are asked to attend. Official announcement of the forthcoming message is made by the State Council of Defense in a special bulletin sent to all local Neighborhood, County Auxiliary and Neighborhood Committees as follows:"In State Council Bulletin No. 18, it was requested that in connection with the exercises on Independence day some message from President Wilson to the people should be read."The Council of National Defense announces that the Four Minute Men have secured from our President a message and a suggestion for an address designed for that particular occasion. The State Council of Defense, therefore, suggests that in such celebration as you are planning for that day, your program should include the reading of that message."If it is widely known that a communication directly from the President of the United States to the people will be read for the first time on that day it should insure the attendance of every patriotic soul."Neither the message nor its purport should be published until July fifth."Kindly get in touch with your Four Minute Men and arrange to have the message read at all meetings in your county."FROM UNCLE SAM TO HOUSEWIVES.Pity the poor unexpected guest next winter in the household where the mistress has not done her share in generously stocking her pantry shelves with cans of fruit and vegetables. And pity the poor family of the same short sighted woman. For the old standby of canned food from the grocer will not be as universally available as usual.Uncle Sam has hinted that if you don't can your own fruit and vegetables you may not have any. Uncle Sam is looking out first for his soldiers abroad, and in the training camps, and has first hand information on just how many cans of food from the factories there will be left over after he has all he wants. And his tip is, to get busy right away with your mans and your driers, and to keep busy for the rest of the summer, saving as much of the fresh vegetable and fruit crop as you possibly can. You will be glad of it next winter.Expected literature from Washington, giving instructions for canning and drying, has not materialized and the State Council of Defense will be unable to furnish it, as it announced it would be a week ago. This, however, should not interfere with the work of Illinois housewives, as approved methods of modern canning and drying are receiving much attention in current magazines and papers.So get to work, and save money and food by doing your next winter's marketing now."WE MUST WIN THE WAR."

By Governor Frank O. Lowden.

We must win the war. I have been asked, "But what if the western battle front should be shattered?" I have said, "We must win this war even then." I have been asked to suppose that the channel ports are seized and the English army driven out of France. The answer is, "We must win the war."Even if bleeding France—which has won more glory in the last four years than she had ever won in a century of all her glorious past—even if France is overrun; even if her brave army should become but a defeated remnant, and France should like broken and helpless at Germany's feet, what then? The answer is, "We still must win this war."And if, which God forbid, the German fleet should sail forth and destroy the allied fleets and land in England, what then? We still must win this war.If we realize what it means, if we know its full significance, there is no price we can pay for victory too great. Better, infinitely better, that Germany should devastate not only England and France, but should murder our people as well and make of this continent the same desert, savage land it was when our forbears came, that the American people should come under the iron heel of military despotism.—From Speech to the Illinois State Bar Association, May 31, 1918.DRAWING GIVES ORDER

Strange Powder Accident.

A strange accident occurred at Durham, England, recently. A laborer employed in a limestone quarry was carrying a tin powder bottle containing a quantity of gunpowder. There was a rope handle attached to the tin. He had to go over the railway, and, as ill-luck would have it, just as he was going over the bridge, the rope by which he was carrying the tin broke, and the lid came off, and the tin fell down the embankment, leaving behind a train of gunpowder, which was as neatly laid as if it had been done for the purpose of an explosion. A locomotive was passing below, and a "live" cinder dropped from the fire-box of the engine, exploded the train of powder from the ground to the powder bottle, setting the workman's clothing on fire. He was badly burned, and died the following day.

Lake Abitibi.

Abitibi is an old Indian name, and yet comparatively new to most Canadians. The building of the Transcontinental railway made it known to people outside the comparatively small groups always interested in the Northland. Lake Abitibi lies about due north of Lake Timiskaming on the boundary between Quebec and Ontario. The name means "halfway—across water," due to the situation of the lake, which is about half way between Timiskaming and James' bay on the old route followed by the voyagers of the Hudson's Bay company. A few years ago all the region about Lake Abitibi was a wilderness; today it contains a flourishing colony of French-Canadians, who are carving farms out of the wilderness and turning the timber into lumber and pulpwood.

How the Kangaroo Got Its Name.

When Captain Cook discovered Australia he sent his sailors ashore to buy the body of an animal which he saw in possession of the natives. After the bargain was made the men tried to find out the name of the animal. But the natives, not being able to understand English, replied in their own language: "Kan-ga-roo," which meant, "I don't know," meaning that they did not know what the men were talking about. The sailors, however, thought they had the answer to their question and reported to their captain that the animal was called a kangaroo, and so the poor kangaroo got a name that did not belong to him, and has had it ever since.

What the Tongue Can Do.

The tongue hath its ministry of mercy and sympathy. Men cannot be scolded into love nor scourged into goodness. What lashings can never do soft words accomplish, asserts Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis. Fortunately, indeed, the community that has a few individuals who go through life curing sorrows, allaying discontents, healing enmities, sweetening bitter fountains, scattering happiness and good-will. One such nature can influence an entire community, just as one flower will crowd a room with sweet odors.

Queen Bees Are Productive.

A marvelous story is that of the queen bee's marriage flight, when she goes sailing off toward the blue sky and selects her mate—the unhappy gentleman drone who dies that same day. She never sees her husband again, and never wants to. She lays eggs for the rest of her life, and cares only for her duties, laying about three thousand eggs per day until very old.

A Map Puzzle.

A few years ago two brothers who lived in a city of twenty thousand inhabitants made a jigsaw picture puzzle from a colored map of their city glued to a thin piece of board. By playing the game of putting the irregular little pieces together, relates the Youth's Companion, they soon learned the names of the different streets, avenues, parks, public buildings, factories and churches as they appeared on the map, and before long they could point to any one of the places and name it. Recently the brothers have formed a partnership in the business of delivering parcels, hand-bills and messages. They are famous for quick service; they can go unerringly and swiftly to any place in the city. Their map game has proved to be of practical value. Other boys who may have no intention of starting a delivery service will find the game interesting, and will also discover its practical value; for a thorough knowledge of the region round you, whether it be country, town or thickly settled city, always brings some advantage to its possessor.

The "Cork Convent."

A striking curiosity near Cintra, Portugal, is an ancient convent built partially in the interior of an immense rock, says Very World. The convent is situated in a very isolated spot, and was formerly surrounded by a dense wood of cork trees. The convent is known as the Convent de Cortica, or "Cork Convent," for the reason that the monks' cells, chapel, kitchen and refectory are all lined with cork to keep out the damp. From 1500 to 1834 the convent was inhabited by an order of monks known as the Capuchins, a remarkable feature of their religion being that, except on certain occasions silence was obligatory. Since 1834, when the monasteries and convents of Portugal were dissolved, the convent has not been occupied, though it is open to the public, a caretaker residing there for this purpose.

Cleans School Erasers.

With the electrically driven machine recently developed by a manufacturing concern in the east erasers are cleaned right in the schoolroom or in the corridor. No need to throw them into a basket and take them outside or into the basement. A small girl can operate the device and get the erasers thoroughly clean, says The Electrical Experimenter. Turning the switch sets a rapidly revolving brush in motion. This loosens the dust and the suction developed by the motor extracts all of the dust from the surface and crevices of the felt. The dust is drawn into a section of the base. The air created by the strong suction is filtered before it comes out of the exhaust.

Bees Hum in Sharps.

Landolse, the famous naturalist, has calculated that to produce the sound of F the fly vibrates its wing 352 times a second, and the bee to create A vibrates 440 times a second. A tired bee hums on E sharp. This change is, perhaps, involuntary, but undoubtedly at the command of the will, and is similar to the voice. When seeking honey a bee hums to F sharp. Landolse noticed three different tones emitted by insects—a long one during flight, a higher one when the wings are held so that they cannot vibrate, and a higher one yet when the insect is held so that none of its limbs can be moved.

"Turkey Ranching" Is Tried.

In the foothill region of California, in some sections of Arizona and other Western states, "turkey ranching" has become a recognized industry, though as yet an infant one. Some of these turkey ranches produce more than 1,000 birds a year. The ideal situation for turkey ranching is one where the natural food of the turkey, such as grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation and seeds, is abundant. A range where acorns are abundant is especially suitable. The turkeys are driven out on the range each day, like sheep, and back home at night. They are sometimes herded by men on horseback, like cattle. Specially trained dogs also are used.

The Coffee Trade.

Statistical returns relating to the coffee trade of the United States show the record breaking figure of 1,319,570,802 pounds as the quantity imported in the 12 months ending June 30, 1917—an amount which maintains the 100,000,000 pounds a year increase that has marked the American imports of coffee since the outbreak of the war in Europe.

Prohibits Religious Symbols.

The Koran prohibits the use of images and symbols in the religious ceremonies of the strict Turks, or the internal decoration of the temples and mosques, the rule being so strict as not to permit the martial or civic decoration of the greatest generals or other distinguished persons.

She Liked Ice Cream.

After looking the menu over carefully Virginia decided on ice cream. Knowing her fondness for sandwiches, her mamma said, "Why, Virginia, I thought you liked sandwiches better than anything else." "I do," she replied, "but ice cream is so tastetative."

"This high cost of living is something fearful." "What can we do? As the ancient Greeks used to say, matters are on the knees of the gods." "We'll see patches there, too, if this keeps up."

Rubber Outwears Steel.

In a recent test it was found that rubber is in certain respects stronger than steel. A sand blast under enormous pressure was blown on a piece of rubber and a piece of steel, and the rubber outwore the steel three to one.

How Tom Liked Eggs.

Mother was getting Tom his breakfast. He loves eggs and mother was frying them when Tom, who was watching her, cried, "Oh, mother, don't turn mine. I want one with a stomach on it."

Energy and Laziness.

What we call laziness in a healthy human being is something very different. It has nothing to do with the lack of energy or love of repose. On the contrary, observes the New York Independent, the boy most inattentive to his lessons is frequently the boy whose inexhaustible energy wears the life out of his parents and teachers. He hates the fifth reader, but he will forget supper to finish his paper bound copy of Dead Eye Dick, the King of the Outlaws. He hates to write compositions in class, but he finds it no labor to compose squibs satirizing his classmates for the school paper, though the tax on his ingenuity is as great in the latter case as in the former. He does not like drawing lessons, but he loves to draw, and grumbles about bringing in wood for supper, but he will carry forests to build a bonfire. He finds gymnasium work a bore, but he submits to more exacting discipline from his baseball coach than any teacher would dare to impose.

Odd Church Bells.

A curious story is told of the bells of Messingham church, England. It is said that a long time ago a traveler passing through Messingham noticed three men sitting on a stile in the churchyard and calling out, "Come to church, Thompson!" "Come to church, Brown!" "Come to church, Wilkins!" And so on. Greatly surprised, the traveler asked what it meant. He was told the place having no bells, they called the folk to church in this way. The traveler remarked that it was a pity that so fine a church should be without bells, and at the same time asked the men if they could make three for the church if he would pay for them himself. They readily agreed to do this. By trade the three men were a tinker, a carpenter and a shoemaker. When next the traveler passed that way he found the three men ringing three bells, which said "Ting, tonk, pluff," being made respectively of tin, wood and leather.

Shoe-Lace Annoyances.

The tips on shoe laces are a real annoyance to women, both because they often come off, leaving a fringed end, and because when they are on and tucked in the top of the shoe they frequently tear the stockings. One ingenious girl has freed herself of all such trouble hereafter by removing the tips when the laces are new, and winding them for a half inch or so down with sewing silk, using a needle to fasten the end. Men who are annoyed with the tips coming off their laces can supply new tips by twisting the ends with sealing wax. If a shoe lace breaks do not tie it together, but lap the fringed ends and sew them together neatly, running the sewing thread up through the good part of the lace.

The Long Chance

By Peter D. Kyne.

Copyrighted by the H. K. Fly Co.

"Mrs. Pennycook," he thundered, "you will please tend to your own business, ma'am. Donnie, my dear, I'm going to wire Los Angeles and order up a heap o' big red roses on 25—damme, Mrs. Pennycook, what the devil are you lookin' at, ma'am?"

"Nothing," she retorted, although it was a fact that had she been Medusa a singularly life-like replica of Dan Pennycook in concrete might have been produced, upon which the possibility of San Pasqual might gaze and be warned of the dangers attendant upon mating with the Mrs. Pennycooks of this world.

Donna commenced to cry. Mr. Pennycook's sympathy, albeit checked and moderated to a great extent by the presence of his wife, was nevertheless, the most genuine sample of that rare commodity which she had received up to that moment. His action had been so brave—so spontaneous—he knew—he understood; Dan Pennycook had a soul. And besides he was going to wire for some red roses—and O, how scarce were roses in San Pasqual!

"O Mr. Pennycook, dear Mr. Pennycook," she wailed, and sought instant refuge on his honest breast. She placed her arms around his neck and cried, and Mr. Pennycook cried also, until his single Sunday handkerchief was used up—whereat he pleaded dumbly with his wife for her handkerchief—and was refused. So, like some great blubbering boy, he used his fists, while Mrs. Pennycook looked coldly on, working her lower lip and the tip of her nose, rabbit-fashion for all the world like one who, having anticipated a sniff of the pines of Araby, has detected instead a shocking aroma of corned beef and cabbage.

It was a queer tableau, indeed; Donna weeping on Mr. Pennycook's breast, when every instinct of her sex, even the vaguest acceptance of tradition and custom, dictated that she should have wept on Mrs. Pennycook's breast. Mrs. Pennycook realized the incongruity of the situation and was shrewd enough to attribute it to a strong aversion to her on the part of Donna Corblay. She resolved to make them both pay for her humiliation—Dan, within the hour, Donna whenever the opportunity should occur.

CHAPTER IV

When Donna and Mr. Pennycook had succeeded eventually in overcoming their emotions, the worthy yardmaster and his wife took their departure. Mr. Pennycook was compelled to return to work and something told him that Donna would be happier alone than with Mrs. Pennycook; hence he made no objection to her leaving the Hat Ranch.

They had scarcely left when the man whom Sam Singer had consulted at the Silver Dollar saloon earlier in the day appeared from the north angle of the adobe wall, where he had been lurking, and dodged into the Hat Ranch enclosure. Donna was seated at the kitchen table, her face in her hands, when he arrived. He could see her through the open half-window of the lean-to, so he came to the window, thrust his head and shoulders in and coughed.

Donna raised her head and gazed into the face of the worst man in San Pasqual.

This peculiarly distinguished individual was Mr. Harley P. Hennage, the proprietor of a faro game in the Silver Dollar saloon. He had an impassive, almost dull, face (accentuated, perhaps, from much playing of poker in early life) which, at times, would light up with the shy smile of a trustful child, revealing three magnificent golden upper teeth. He bore no more resemblance to the popular conception of a western gambler than does a college professor to a coal passer. Mr. Hennage lived in his shirt sleeves, paid cash and hated jewelry. He had never been known to carry a derringer or a small, genteel, silver-plated revolver in his waistcoat pocket. Neither did he appear in public with a bowie knife down his bootleg. Not being a Mexican, he did not carry a knife, and besides he always wore congress gaiters. Owing to the fact that he was a large florid sandy person with a freckled bristly neck and singularly direct fearless manner of looking at his man with eyes that were sunken baleful and rather piggy, the exigencies of Mr. Hennage's profession had never even warranted recourse to his two most priceless possessions—his hands. Yet, despite this fact, and the further fact that he had never accomplished anything more reprehensible than staking his coin against that of his neighbor, Mr. Hennage had acquired the reputation of being the worst man in San Pasqual. In the language of the country, he was a hard hombre, for he looked it. When one gazed at Mr. Hennage he observed a human bulldog, a man who would finish anything he started. Hence, he was credited with the ability and inclination to do the most impossible things if given half an excuse. It is needless therefore, to remark that Mr. Hennage's depravity, like Mrs. Pennycook's virtue, partook more or less of the nature of the surrounding country; that is to say, it was susceptible of development.

most people in this queer world of ours harbor an impression that if you make friends with a dog he will not bite you, and that lion tamers are enabled to accumulate gray hairs merely by the exercise of nerve and the paralyzing influence of the human eye. Hence, when the worst man in San Pasqual confronted Donna, she did not at once scream for Sam Singer, but looked Mr. Hennage in the eye and quavered.

"Good Morning, Mr. Hennage."

It was hard work continuing to look Mr. Hennage in the eye. To-day he looked more like a bulldog than ever, for his eyes were red-lidded and watery.

Mr. Hennage nodded. He drew a silk handkerchief from his coat pocket and blew his nose with a report like a pistol shot before he spoke.

"How's the kitty?" he demanded. Donna glanced toward the stove and about the kitchen wearily and replied.

"I don't know, Mr. Hennage. I guess she's around the house somewhere."

"The Lord love you" murmured the gambler. The hard lips lifted, the dull impassive face was lit for a instant by the trustful childish smile, and through the glory of that infrequent facial expression Harley P.'s three gold front teeth flashed like triple searchlights.

"I mean, Miss Corblay, have you any money?"

"Only a little bit, Mr. Hennage," Donna quavered. The question frightened her and she hastened to assure the bad man that it was a very little bit indeed, and all that her mother had been able to save. She trembled lest the monster might take a notion to rob her of even this meager amount.

"I just had a hunch it was that way with you." The worst man in San Pasqual wagged his great head, as if to compliment himself on his penetration. "I just knew it."

This was not strictly the truth. Sam Singer had managed to convey to the gambler some hint of the Corblay fortunes, financial as well as material, and had begged of him to exercise his superior white man intelligence to aid the Indian in wrestling with white man's problem that confronted the dwellers at the Hat Ranch. Rather a queer source, indeed, for Sam Singer to seek help for his young mistress; but then Sam was not given to reflecting upon the ethics of any given line of procedure. The fact of the matter was that Harley P. Hennage was the only white man in San Pasqual who deigned to honor Sam Singer with a greeting and his cast-off shoes. In return Sam had honored Harley P. with his confidence and an appeal to him for further aid.

"I have attended to everything," continued Mr. Hennage. "Preacher, quartette from Bakersfield—they're real good, too. Playin' in a theater up there, but I engaged to get 'em back in time for the evenin' performance on a special train—so they said they'd come. An' I've ordered an elegant coffin, the best they had in stock, with a floral piece from Sam Singer an' his squaw an' a pillar o' white carnations with 'Mother in violets—from you, understand? Everything the best, spick an' span an' no cost to the estate. Compliments o' Harley P. Hennage, Miss Donna." He paused and rubbed his hairy freckled hands together in an embarrassed manner. "I hope you won't think I'm actin' forward, because I ain't one o' the presumin' kind. I just wanted to do somethin' to help out because—your mother was a very lovely lady. Three times a day for ten years she give me my change an' there was never a time when she didn't have a decent, kindly word for me—the only good woman in this town that'd look at me—God bless her! Mum's the word, Miss Donna. Don't let nobody know I did it, because it'd hurt your reputation. And don't tell Mrs. Pennycook! Pennycook's a clean decent old sport, but look out for the missus!" Here Mr. Hennage lowered his voice, glanced cautiously around to make certain that he would not be overheard by Mrs. Pennycook, leaned further in the window and improvising a megaphone with his hands, whispered hoarsely the damning words "She talks!"

Donna nodded. For a long time she had suspected Mrs. Pennycook of this very practice.

"I've got to light out now" Mr. Hennage continued. "Folks'll wonder if they see me hangin' around here. But before I go I want to tell you somethin'. Your mother was a countin' on my change yesterday when she got took. She thought she was goin' then on account o' the pain bein' sharper than common, an' she cries out: Donnie! Donnie! My baby, whatever is a-goin' to become o' you when I'm gone! I was the only one that heard her say it. I caught her when she was fallin', an' I told her I'd see that you didn't lack for nothin' while I lived an' that I'd keep an eye on you an' see that nothin' wrong happened to you. Your mother couldn't speak none then, Miss Donna, but she give me hand a little press to show she was on an' that whatever I did was done with her say-so. Consequently, Miss Donna, any time you need a friend you just ring up the Silver Dollar saloon an'

then the barkeep to call Hennage to the phone. Remember! I ain't the presumin' kind, but I can be a good friend—"

He dodged back as if somebody had struck at him. Before Donna could quite realize what he had been saying he had disappeared. She ran to the iron-barred gate, looked out and saw him walking up the railroad tracks toward San Pasqual. She called after him. He turned, waved his hand and continued on—a great fat bow-legged common-place figure of a man, mopping his high bald forehead—a plain, lowly citizen of uncertain morals; a sordid money-snatcher coming forth from his den of iniquity to masquerade for an hour as the Angel of Hope, and returning—hopeless.

For the last time that bound Harley P. Hennage to San Pasqual was severed. His soul was not mediocre; he could dwell no longer in San Pasqual without feeling himself accursed. Never again could he bear to sit on his high stool at the lunch counter in the railroad eating-house, where he had boarded for ten years, and watch a stranger taking cash. He had watched Donna's mother so long that the vigil had become a part of his being—a sort of religious ceremony—and in this little tragedy of life no understudy could ever star for Harley P. Her beautiful sad eyes were closed forever now and the tri-daily joy of his sordid existence had vanished.

What little things go to make up the big pleasures of life! Who could guess, for instance, that the simple deceit of presenting a twenty-dollar piece in payment of a fifty-cent meal check had held for Harley P. a greater joy than the promise of ultimate salvation? Yet it had; for during the slight wait at the pay counter while the cashier counted out his change he had been privileged to view her at close quarters, to mark the contour of her nose, to note the winning sweetness of her tender mouth, to hearken to the music of her low voice counting out the dollars, and, perchance saying something common-place himself as he gathered up his change! Yet that had been sufficient to make of San Pasqual a paradise for Harley P. He knew his limitations; he had presumed but once, long enough to ask the cashier to marry him. Her refusal had made him worship her the more, only he worshipped thereafter in silence and from afar. She had not laughed at him nor scorned him nor unbraided him, lowly worm that he was, for daring to hope that he might be good enough for her! No. She had told him about her husband, who had gone prospecting and never returned; of Sam Singer who had been rescued on the desert when close to death, of his return with a wild story of much gold and a man, whose name he did not know, who had killed her husband and escaped with the gold. She respected Mr. Hennage, she admired him, she knew he was good and kind—and she did not refer to his method of making a living. She merely laid her soft hand on his, as he reached for his nineteen dollars and a half change, and said: "Do you understand, Harley?"

Yes, she had called him Harley that day, and he had understood. Her heart was out in the desert. He took the terrible blow with a smile and a flash of his gold teeth, and never referred to his secret again.

He thought of her now, as he waddled back to his neglected game in the Silver Dollar saloon. He wished that he might have been privileged to admittance into that little room off the kitchen where something told him she was lying; he wished that he might see her once again before they buried her—but that would be presuming. He wished he knew of some plan whereby that poor body might be spared the degradation of interment in the lonely, wind-swept, desert cemetery, side by side with Indians, Mexicans, Greek section hands and the rude forefathers of San Pasqual.

What a profanation! That horrible cemetery, surrounded by a fence of barbed wire and superannuated railroad ties, to receive that beloved clay. He pictured her as he had seen her every day for ten years, and a rush of vain regret brought the big tears to his buttermilk eyes; the chords of memory twanged in his breast and he paused on the outskirts of San Pasqual with hands upraised, fists clenched in an agony of desperation.

"I can't stand it!" he muttered. "I can't. It'll be lonely. I've got to get out. I'll close my game after the funeral an' vamoose."

But to return to affairs at the Hat Ranch.

While Harley P. Hennage sat in the Silver Dollar saloon that afternoon dealing faro automatically and pondering the problem of the precise purpose for which he had been created; and while Mrs. Pennycook went from house to house west of the tracks, expounding her personal view of the extraordinary situation at the Hat Ranch, a south-bound train pulled in and discharged a trained nurse, an undertaker, a rectangular redwood box and more floral pieces than San Pasqual had seen in a decade. After instituting some inquiries as to its location, the nurse and the undertaker proceeded to the Hat Ranch, followed by a wagon bearing the box and the flowers.

But why dilate on these mournful details? Suffice the fact that Mrs. Corblay was laid away next morning in conformity with the wishes of the only human being who had any right to express a wish in the matter. The Bakersfield quartette was there and sang "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God To Thee"; the Bakersfield minister was there and read: "I am the Resurrection and the Life"; Soft Wind threw ashes on her head and cried in the Cahulla tongue, "Ai! Ai! Beloved," after the manner of her people, while Sam Singer stood at the head of the grave like a figure done in bronze. Dan Pennycook was there, supporting Donna, and made a spec-view with a more complacent eye the mental travail of any married lady whose husband might be exposed to the battery of Donna's eyes.

Such wonderful eyes! Dark blue, wide apart, intelligent, tender, with a trick of peeping up at one from under the long black lashes, and conveying such a medley of profound emotions that it is small wonder that men—and occasional women—forgot their change in the excitement of gazing upon this superior attraction.

In his old favorite seat down at the end of the lunch counter we see Mr. Harley P. Hennage partaking of his evening meal. He had been away from San Pasqual for three years, and he has just returned. Also he has just decided to remain (for reasons best known to himself), although we may be pardoned for presuming that it may be because he sees an old, tender memory reflected in Donna's eyes.

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed by Dixon Testimony.

Don't take our word for it. Don't depend on a stranger's statement. Read Dixon endorsement. Read the statements of Dixon citizens.

And decide for yourself.

Here is one case of it. P. H. Kenzler, proprietor painting and decorating establishment, 722 S. Dement St., Dixon, says: "About five years ago I had a bad attack of kidney complaint. I was laid up for three weeks and couldn't do a bit of work. I had to hobble about with a stick, my back was so sore and lame. When in bed I had to be dropped up with pillows. My work as a painter and inhaling the fumes from the paint, is what I blame for my kidney trouble. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Campbell & Son's Drug Store and used them. It was only a couple of days before I was back at work again." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin, a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nervy wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists who should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten years of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Her first move was a master-stroke of feminine genius. She issued an order to her husband to buy no more hats of Donna Corblay.

Three loud cheers for Pennycook! He revolved. He did more. He turned on Mrs. Pennycook—he shook a smutty finger under her nose. He said something. He said he would see her, Mrs. Pennycook, further—in fact, considerable further—than that! All of which was very rude and vulgar of Mr. Pennycook, we must admit, but—

And now our stage is set at last; so assuming three years to have passed, behold the curtain rising, discovering Donna Corblay behind the cashier's counter in the railroad eating-house in the little desert hamlet of San Pasqual.

It is a different Donna that confronts us now, and the first glimpse is almost sufficient to cause us to

Out of the Way.
 Colonel Hal Corbett, formerly of Kentucky, but now practicing law in New York, went to an athletic tourney over on Long Island last spring. One of the contestants showed tremendous speed and agility notwithstanding the fact that he was a one legged man.

"I wonder how that young chap lost his leg?" said a friend to Corbett.
 "I figure that he didn't lose it; that he had it cut off purposely," said Corbett.
 "In the name of heaven, why?"
 "So it wouldn't get in his way and hamper him when he was out winning those track events," said Corbett.—Exchange Playing Safe.

 "We have asked her several times to sing, and she has refused each time."
 "If I were you I'd let it go at that. Some of the strangers may go away thinking they've missed something."

How Greeks and Hebrews Met.
 The Greeks and the Hebrews met for the first time in the slave market. The medium of communication seems to have been the Tyrian slave merchants. About 800 B. C., Joel speaks of the Tyrians as selling the children of Judah to the Greeks (Joel 3:6). In Ezra 27:13, the Greeks are mentioned as bartering their brazen vessels for slaves.

Not So Hard as Living.
 All say "How hard it is that we have to die"—a strange complaint to come from the mouth of people who have to live.—Mark Twain.

Salt Superstitions.
 The kernel of all the salt superstitions seems to be this: Salt cannot be corrupt, and has, therefore, the title to be regarded as a symbol of immortality. In Ireland it was for long the custom to place a pewter plate containing salt upon the heart of the corpse until burial. Then, with coals and holy water, it was thrown into the grave.

Economy Note.
 By reversing the handle on a dust brush which has been worn near the point additional wear may be obtained.

Well Heeled.
The shipwrecked sailor sat disconsolate on a lonely raft in the middle of the trackless ocean. In his hands he held the last remnants of a pair of shoes. "Though reduced to the lowest extremities and completely surrounded by water," he croaked hoarsely, "I can still take to my heels." With these words he made his semi-weekly meal and spent the remainder of the afternoon picking the nails out of his teeth.

PINEAPPLES PINEAPPLES

I have fifty cases of fresh canned Hawaiian sliced pineapple, extra fancy goods, not a cheap article but a quality grade. I can sell them to you at prices you cannot afford to bother to get the fresh pines and put up. If it is money you want to save call at the store or phone for our prices.

I will guarantee every can you buy to keep until it is used, you cannot do this with your own canning.

I have the goods in the store now; come and have a look at them. Ladies, did you ever stop to think what it costs to can pine-apples?
